In our twentieth century universe pure and applied science has become the cosmic mirror wherein we view the tangible world of reality—a world which can be weighed and measured. Yet science and technology as we know it today is in its infancy. A much older, less concrete science guided our ancestors. It was astrology. Some view this science of the stars as a collection of ridiculous superstitions. Yet astrology holds an element of truth and fascination which appeals to the less sophisticated side of man. It permits him to touch a world more expansive than this cold, factual earth where he lives and moves and has his being.

Astrology is a personal science. It considers each man as an individual, an important person, not just as one infinitesimal part of a vast universe. Moreover, it expands man's mind and spirit, revealing to him the hidden reasons for his actions and analyzing his relationship to the external world. It is in this spirit of individualism and self-exploration that MERCYCREST '70 presents the many-faceted Zodiac, under whose brilliance each of us must find her place in the sun.

Administration-Faculty

Virgo in her greatest strength endows these great people the ability to understand our sometimes clouded minds. As teachers they impart a realization of life, learned only from cruel experience. With Taurus' patience they have stood to watch traditions crumble, giving way to the formation of our idealistic castles. Yet their apparently silent, gentle force of personal integrity speaks eloquently, piercing and shaping our lives. Libra has granted these ambassadors of good will an inherent, unquenchable thirst for goodness and beauty and truth.

Academics

Student life flashes before us in a panoramic, lapsed-time blur of massive rushes from one class to another. Inadvertently, we create a class of our own, each member experiencing at different times the sting of failure, the ring of success. In the spirit of Cancer we cling to tradition, but as Capricorn's children, we seek a balance between the familiar and the new. Capricorn cries to us that the world first needs deep thinkers, and then great doers. We begin to awaken to the challenge of becoming both. When we ache to freeze the movement of time in order to change things now. Cancer urges us to look at an oak tree and to learn that it grew strong because it grew slowly.

the Acquisition of Truth

One highlight of a junior religion course was the program and discussion on drug abuse presented by Captain Gregory and Lieutenant Dean of the Fall River Police Department.

This time it's the sophomores who are the fortunate recipients of one of Father Kazynski's theology lectures.

Gone are the days when religion classes were based solely on the Baltimore Catechism. Juniors Susan Marum, Patricia Crosson, and Susan Pitera lead their class in a vigorous discussion.

Freshmen are learning that one very effective way of getting to the heart of the matter concerning religious belief is to talk things out in small groups.

While the rest of the math class looks on, two courageous juniors attempt to answer that eternal question. By the way . . . what is that eternal question?

Miss Morin's health services class attempts to master the art of artificial respiration. Evelyn Santos and Miss Morin try desperately to 'revive' a fellow classmate as Paula Aubin, Deborah Martins, Paula West and Jeannine Fournier look on approvingly.

Knowledge of Life Through the Abstract

Microscopes! How do they work? As Gloria Nadeau busily tinkers with unknown dials, Nancy O'Connell, fearing to disturb Gloria's concentration, remains silent, while Jane Zdon flings back her long locks in exasperation.

Mon Dieu! Sister Phyllis, what big hands you have! The better to teach geometry with, my dears! Despite sister's apparent formidability, most sophomores survive her class—some even thrive!

A Balance Between Present and Past

Delving industriously into their file boxes, seniors Nancy Marek, Deborah Medeiros, Jeannine Fournier and Theresa LeBlanc attempt to master the techniques of office practice.

Are seniors Marguerite Letendre and Theresa LeBlanc really that deeply engrossed in typing class, or have they been hypnotized by tapping keys?

A stranger would never guess that Diana Beben and Maureen Sayward are new in the fascinating world of swirls and loops. The name of the game is shorthand, and these juniors are playing for keeps.

Denise Gagnon makes a valiant attempt to swallow the gum while answering Sister Gladys' question. Consumer economics is one of several new courses which have been added to the business curriculum this year.

Sister Jane's 'ladies' seem somewhat bewildered. It can't be that only one of a class of forty-two brilliant historians knows the answer!

Although Sister Linda's new idea of teaching from the rear seems a bit awkward, her history class appears to be responding to her latest innovation.

'Security is knowing the answer,' for some of the more ambitious members of this junior American history class. Hopefully, light will soon dawn on the attentive on-lookers.

Kathleen Leary, Cynthia Snyder, Marguerite LeBlanc and Celeste Costa step aside to permit Sister Therese Mary to scrutinize their competency in French.

Parlez-vous francais? You'd better, if you intend to survive in French III!

"It's all Portuguese to us!" sigh Barbara Lacerda and Rose Mary Ryan, as they attempt to struggle through a difficult lesson in Sister Adele's Portuguese class.

Facial expressions on Deborah Roberts, Elizabeth Kulpa and Charlene Larsen seem to say that they enjoy Spanish under Sister Margarita Cecilia's direction.

Could it be that these intellectual sophomores are more interested in the camera than in American literature? Everyone seems to be watching the birdie, smiling and saying 'cheese.'

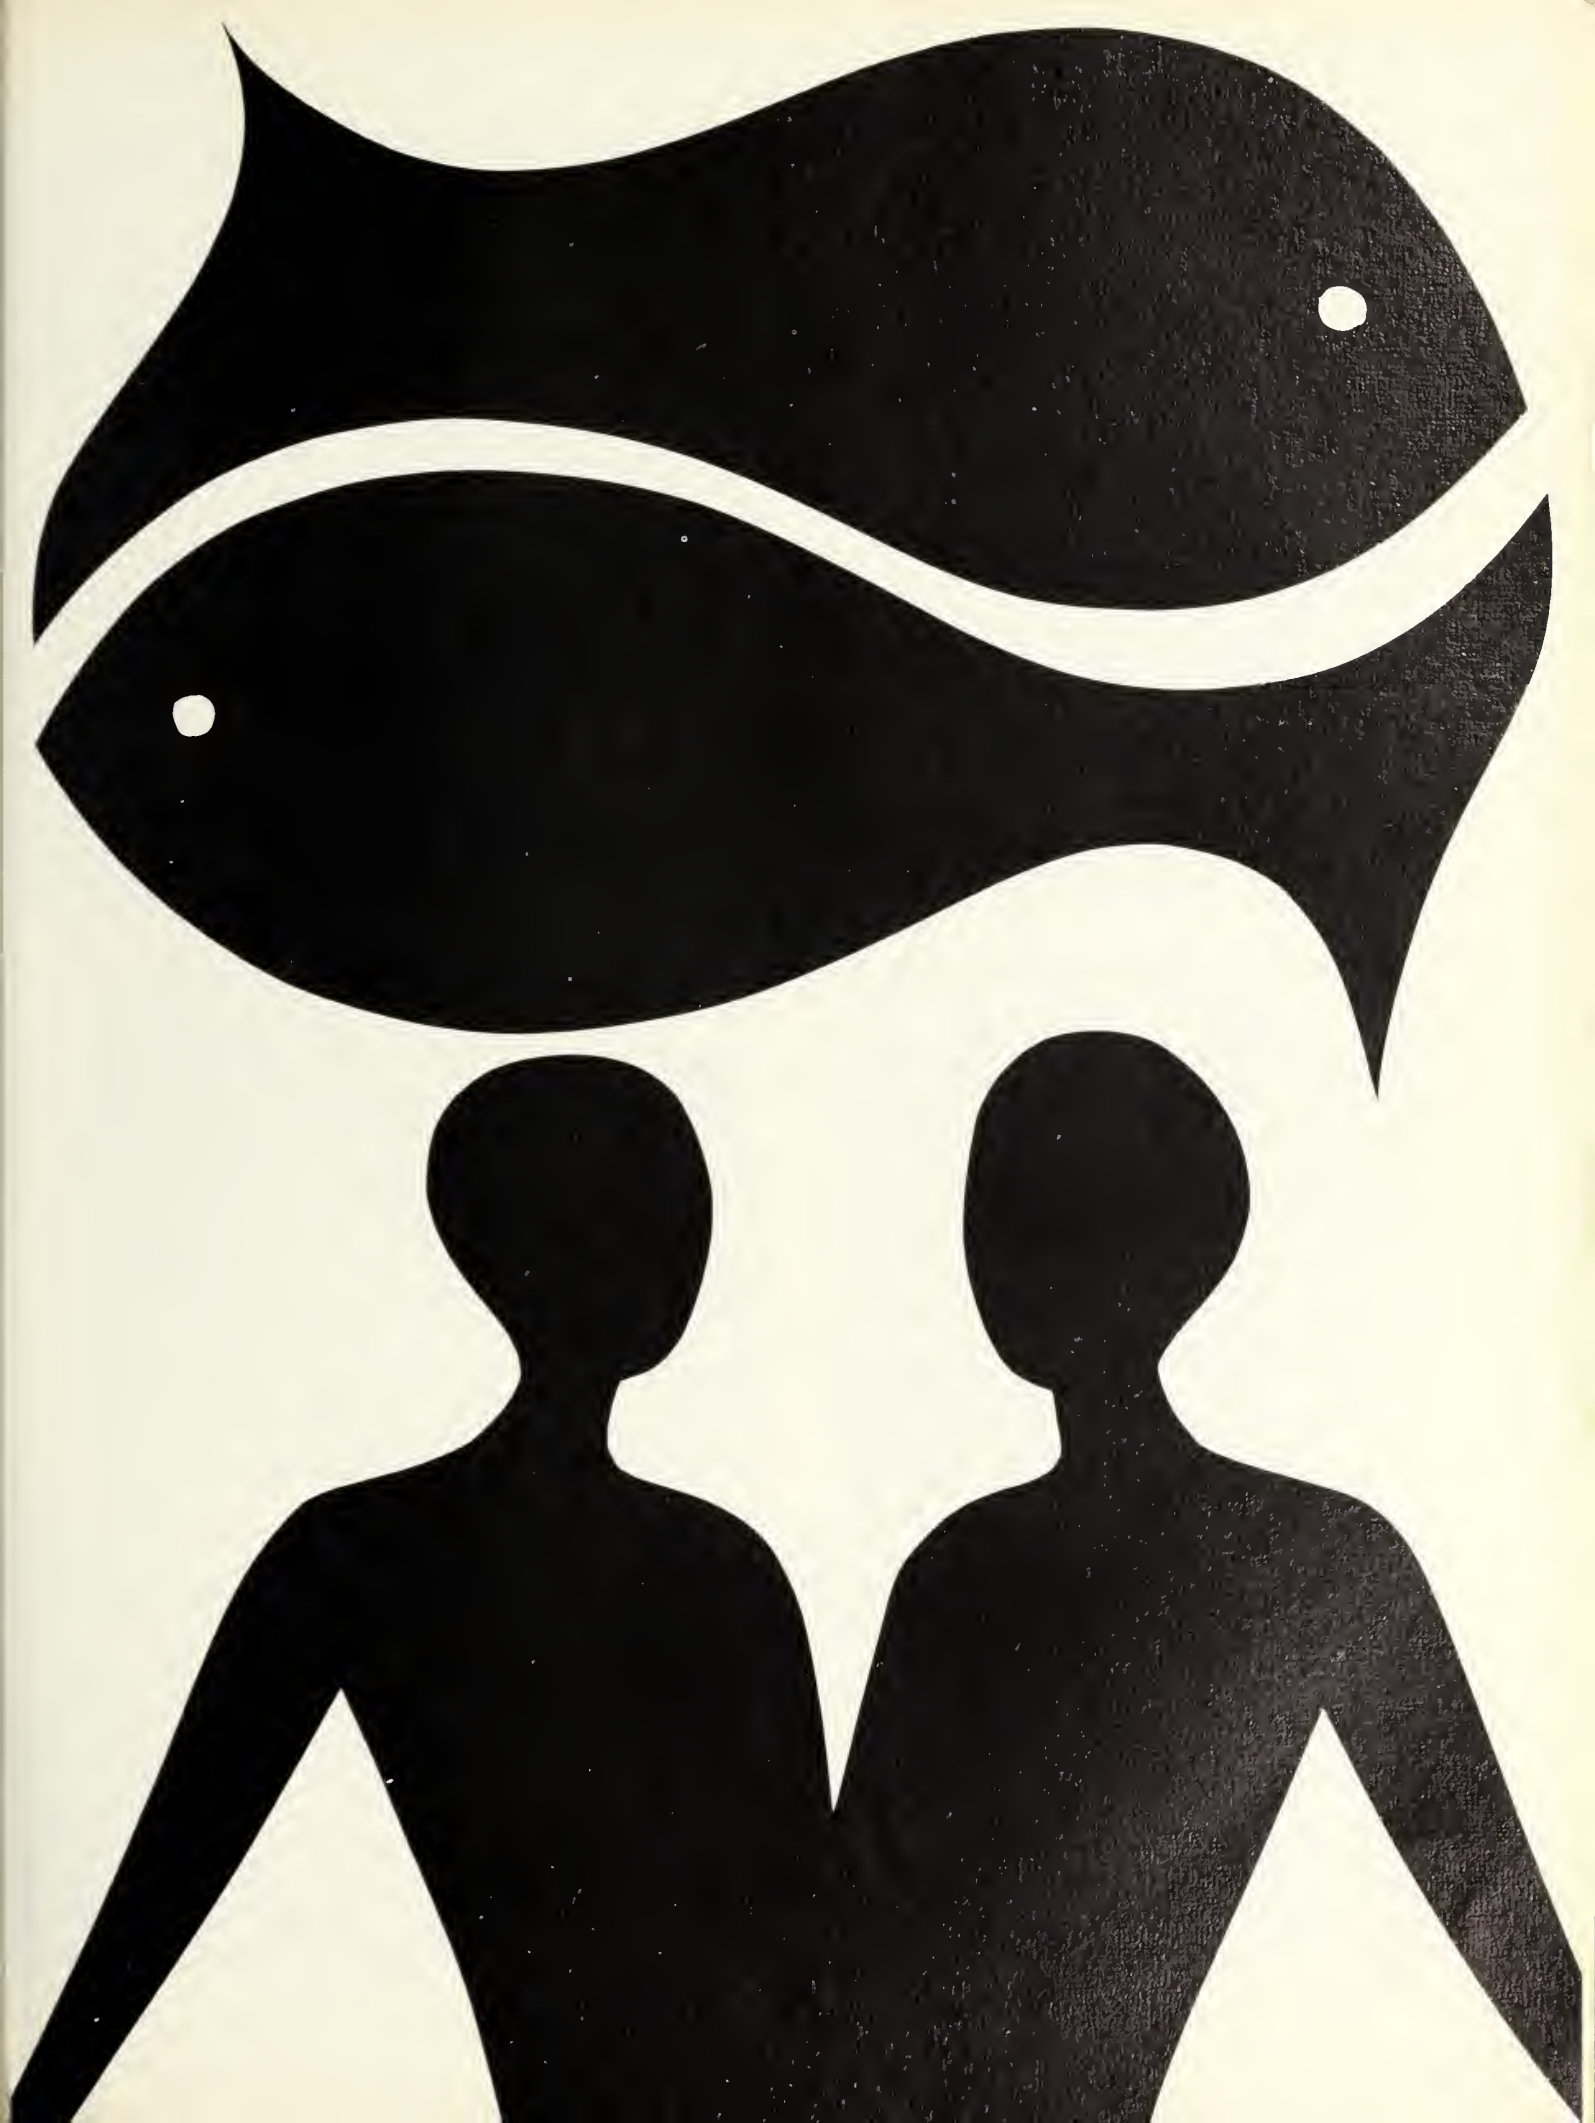
It's hard to determine whether English class members, Diane Lafontaine and Joanne Albernaz, feel amused, bored, or frightened. The latter seems to be on the brink of 'somnia.'

the Expression of Knowledge Through the Word

Junior English classes are immersed in MACBETH once more, wondering how Burnam Wood could ever advance to Dunsinane.

Underclassmen

Adulthood hasn't grasped us yet, but we're so aware of its impending hold. Still we adhere to a clumsy and fickle childhood, frequently peering into our strange world called adolescence. So like the twins of Gemini, we project a dual child-adult personality—that of the child, with her impetuosity and innocence, her obsession for play, her insatiable curiosity; that of the adult, with her intuitive grasp on reality, her extrovert action. Pisces encourages us to accept with dignity our modest role as underclassmen until our own brief, shining moment arrives. All the while, Piscean compassion, humility and sacrifice are blossoming within us.



Initiation into the Freshman Class is not as distasteful as new Mounties sometimes anticipate. Here 'big sister,' Donna Beshara, crowns Susan Rostler as a sign of welcome into Mount's family.

The glory of 1776 is recreated by members of the Freshman Class as they sing out "This Is My Country" at the annual Calendar Party.

FRESHMEN - Bewildered, Vacillating, Impulsive

Denise Casavant, Cheryl Paguette, Barbara Couture, JoAnn Rybka and Cynthia Guay enjoyed themselves dancing to the sounds of the "Resurrection" at our first Mount-Connolly Mixer.

Senior, Cheryl Rousseau, and her initiation victim, Louise Thibotot, lock arms and join forces as they trip down the gym to victory at the Freshman-Senior Frolic.

Although Marguerita St. Denis may be immersed in her own food for thought, we hope it's close to lunch time, for Rachel Paradis' sake!

Freshmen Teresa Patten and Denise Casavant simulate the July-August moon landing mission through an interpretative modern dance feature.

Deborah Medeiros and Michael Madore both valiantly try to hide the fact that this is their very first high school dance. Prediction: by now both parties have become seasoned social successes.

It's great to have friends, especially when the curtain is about to open and you're only half dressed! Joy Pidhorodscki and Cheryl Paquette come to the rescue, while Debra Belanger makes ready for her Calendar Party debut.

Sherrill Vanasse demonstrates the crab walk, baby style, at the Freshman-Senior Frolic, where freshmen and their senior sisters became better acquainted through gymnastics and a hootenanny.

JoAnn Dawson typifies a tragic aftermath of gym class. Aren't you glad you're insured, JoAnn?

Happiness is playing ball on the 'Peanuts' team! Carolyn Arruda as Lucy, gives Charlie Brown, Cynthia Bronhard, the high sign to begin, as Denise "Snoopy" Byron begs for a chance at bat.

Readying yourself for a trip to the Philippines? Take lessons from the sophomores, who adeptly demonstrate a bambo dance originating in that country.

'On the outside looking in,' sophomores, Cynthia Snyder and Paula Charette, capture that mischievous sophomore stance.

"Do you always spend your free time sitting on cars watching autumn leaves fall?" Karen Hochu asks Denise Byron.

Our student center has made school life so much more enjoyable. Sophomore class presidents Carol Larson and Maria Alves relax in Mount's new hangout.

SOPHOMORES - Mentally Energetic, Modest and Unassuming

Ladies lead for a change, as enthusiastic Mounties introduce their hopeful dads to the latest dance steps at the annual Father-Daughter Dance. Have a little patience, girls!

Sophomores Susan Rak, Karen Venancio, Pauline Fortin, Denise Byron, Janine Gendreau and Cynthia Bronhard represent the 'Peanuts' gang at Being Aware Week festivities.

The Family basketball game finds Joyce Gamble rather amused over the antics of Nancy Allen and Mr. Cordeiro. Joyce wonders whether Mr. Cordeiro is trying to make a pass!?

Soggy, sudsy juniors showed their gratitude to Mr. Shannon by washing his car. Faculty Day was one of the ways in which the entire student body observed Being Aware Week.

Juniors are learning that guidance isn't all I.Q. tests and endless forms; it also involves reading, research and discussion. Theresa Morin, Nancy Lawlor, Celeste Vezna, Madeleine Lemaire and Julia Rousseau exchange future plans as they pore through college catalogues.

We wish that Jeannine Prevost, Margaret Gibbons, Gail Souza, Ann Marie Letendre and Michelle Bernier would share the joke with us! It looks like a mighty lively class discussion.

Ambitious juniors, Carol Silva and Nancy Lawlor, (left foreground), together with JoAnn Prezwoznik, Kerry Mello, and Susan Hinchcliffe, pool their resources to create a memorable 'mini-epic.'

Leave it to the juniors to defy that law of nature which says that one cannot eat and talk at the same time. As a matter of fact, it's accepted knowledge that most juniors can assimilate food, fun and facts simultaneously and with facility!

School spirit abounds at the Mount. This merry little band of juniors volubly expresses its support of the basketball team before that big game with a certain arch rival.

Dr. Roland Chabot takes full advantage of his night out with the girls as he dances the evening away with Suzanne Cadieux at Mount's annual Father-Daughter Dance held each February.

JUNIORS - A Personality Bubble Bursting With Generosity

How are we ever going to get Michelle Demers, Susan Pitera, Madeleine Lemaire and Janet Forcier back to the farm if their successful Greek tragedy performance goes to their heads?

Sliding backwards down the bannister, Suzanne Cadieux, Celeste Vezina, Denise St. Onge and Margaret Gibbons seem to be perpetuating the junior tradition of doing things the hard way.

Seniors

It is said that a star's beauty resides in its power of self-reflection. As seniors we approach an unknown future marked by individualism. Hope for success demands that we imitate the star, following the magnanimity of Leo, delving into an intense search and discovery of self. As freshmen we were marked by the fresh Arien qualities of spontaneity and ambition. Now, still clinging to Aries, we assume a certain maturity through the boldness and intensity of Scorpio. We are becoming stars, able to reflect our entire self as we cross the threshold of the Aquarian age which impatiently awaits us.

Activities

Twentieth century man is a protean man—he craves a variety of experiences. Sagittarius and Aquarius accommodate this many-faceted man. Sagittarian curiosity is satisfied by the presence of intellectual outlets, while those whose natures require rigid physical activity become immersed in athletics. Others are impelled by the keen social conscience of Aquarius. These humanitarians dedicate themselves to causes, assume great missions, and advance the affairs of humanity. The enticing variety of extra-curricular demands that one blend one's enthusiastic, Aquarian thirst to accomplish many varied and great things with the Sagittarian faculty of concentrating upon the project of immediate importance.

Disguised in shimmering gold robes, Dawn Hannafin, Jane Charette, Diane Desmarais, and Susan Pacheco await their installation into "Arsonists Anonymous". In reality, they are our newly elected Student Council officers.

Seniors, Lynne Cote, Patricia Cummings, Debra Martins, Paula West, and junior, Nancy Allen, take time from their hectic pace to relax in the Student Council's latest project, the Student Center.

In a Democracy Majority Rules

This year the governing body of Mount, our Student Council, has become involved in many outside projects. The biggest endeavor of the Student Council was the Student Center, where students may take time out from their studies to enjoy this lounge's unique atmosphere. In an endeavor to expand its interests here at Mount and abroad, the Council also participated with area high schools in financing a school in South America.

"Don't keep the faith; spread it," is the seemingly unorthodox theme of the Community of Christian Living. This club impels its members to strive for fulfillment through tangible expression of faith. This year's means to that goal were Being Aware Week, a Christmas party, an Appalachian clothes drive, and the annual food basket and toy drive for the underprivileged.

God is Alive

As their project for the Christian Life Community, two lively probationers, Nancy Romanowicz and Janine Gendreau, are busily preparing favors for the old folks in area hospitals.

The May crowning of the Blessed Virgin Mary, an annual event sponsored by the Community of Christian Living, culminated with the celebration of the Eucharist by Father William Cullen, S.J.

The officers of the Christian Life Community, Cynthia Galvin, president, Laurie Sampson, vice-president, Constance Beben, secretary, and Pauline Gasior, treasurer, pause while wrapping Christmas gifts for the underprivileged children in our community.

If the French hat contest is supposed to be a happy occasion, then why are the smiles of freshmen Linda Furtado, JoAnn Mello, and Diane Morrissette becoming weaker and weaker???

French Club officers Patricia Whalley, vice-president-treasurer, Julie White, president, Susan Pitera, secretary, Michelle Demers, president, Nancy Lawlor, vice-president-treasurer, and Renee Viveiros, secretary, are enthusiastically discussing plans for the annual French Club trip to Boston.

Are Caesar's Gallic Wars the only topics of conversation in Latin? Ask the Latin Club officers Theresa Patten, secretary, Donna St. Hilaire, vice-president, Gail Albernaz, president, and Linda Thompson, treasurer.

Leafing through a Spanish dictionary are Spanish Club officers Barbara Lacerda, secretary, and Christine Harnett, vice-president. President, Paula Cordeiro, and treasurer, Cynthia Bronhard, are not pictured.

Amitié, Amistod, Amistad

"On parle francais au Cercle Francais. Nous nous amusons bien." French customs such as the observance of Saint Catherine's Day, the Feast of the Virgins, add a piquant touch to the routine. Spanish Club members are justly proud to claim that "Aqui se habla espanol," while "Resurgam," the Latin Club has been revived and is now quite active.

Debate Club officers, Carol Vasconcellos, treasurer, Cheryl Rousseau, president, Cathy Polak, secretary, and Dawn Hannafin, vice-president, gather in the library to prepare their strategy for the next debate tournament.

Choosing the right college can be quite the task, the National Honor Society testifies. Members are Betty Ann Beam, Laurie Sampson, Dawn Hannafin, Poldi Tschirch, president, Julie White and Cheryl Rousseau, vice-president.

Even the members of that august body, the National Honor Society, envy the oratorical skill of our Debate Club members. Both groups devote themselves to scholarship and service to our school. The Debate Society sponsored an exhibition debate staged by University of Massachusetts debaters, while the National Honor Society sponsored National Education Week this year.

Honorable Judges

FALL RIVER PUBLIC LIBRARY

Throughout the year, Humanities Club members develop their twofold purpose of enjoyment and enrichment through art, literature, and drama. The 1620 Riot, a freshman orientation program, incorporated all three phases, presenting a panoramic view of the Plymouth Colony. The club's other major project was a foray into the field of the dramatic arts, with a Christmas play entitled, "The One Who Wouldn't Play Jesus."

Art For Our Sake

Time out for the 'animals' in the annual Christmas play, "The One Who Wouldn't Play Jesus". The players are: Catherine McMullen, the dog, Elizabeth Sullivan, the giraffe, Janine Gendreau, the elephant, and Dale Taper, the cow.

Climbing on the library staging, Humanities Club officers, Anne Marie Valcourt, secretary, Paula Cordeiro, vice-president, Janine Gendreau, treasurer, and Nicole Letendre, president, demonstrate their customary warm-up techniques for planning exciting meetings.

Humanities Club members Donna Lauzon, Kathleen Higgins, and Elaine Letendre embark on a journey into the past. Their trip took them to Old Sturbridge Village where they had a glimpse of early American life.

Expression is necessary to any organization if it is to remain dynamic. The MERCIAN, our bi-monthly newspaper publication, is the students' milieu of presenting their ideas and opinions. Our yearbook, MERCYCREST, aims to synthesize and crystallize four years of living, learning, and loving.

In Retrospect

MERCIAN editors Sharon Borges, Kathleen Foley, Betty Ann Beam (editor-in-chief), and Pauline Gasior seem very pleased with the results of their first publication.

The MERCIAN staff stops to read its latest publication. Top to bottom are: Barbara Lynch, Sharon Borges, Kathleen Foley, Paula Motta, Constance Beben, Betty Ann Beam (editor-in-chief), and Pauline Gasior.

Co-editors of MERCYCREST '70 ardently work toward their next deadline, while Gay Chrupcala, editor-in-chief, chalks up the remaining financial balance to be achieved. Co-editors are Poldi Tschirch, Cynthia Galvin, (photography editor), Catherine Lapointe, and Susan Pacheco.

◀ Huddled in the clutter of that mysterious Room 11, MERCYCREST staff members sift through piles of pictures to decide which best reflect the spirit of '70.

As the Christmas season approaches once again, the Glee Club prepares for its annual Christmas concert, and the festive holiday atmosphere is enhanced by the sweet sound of caroling.

Sister Thérèse Mary transforms the Glee Club into an overwhelming source of melody at the annual Christmas concert.

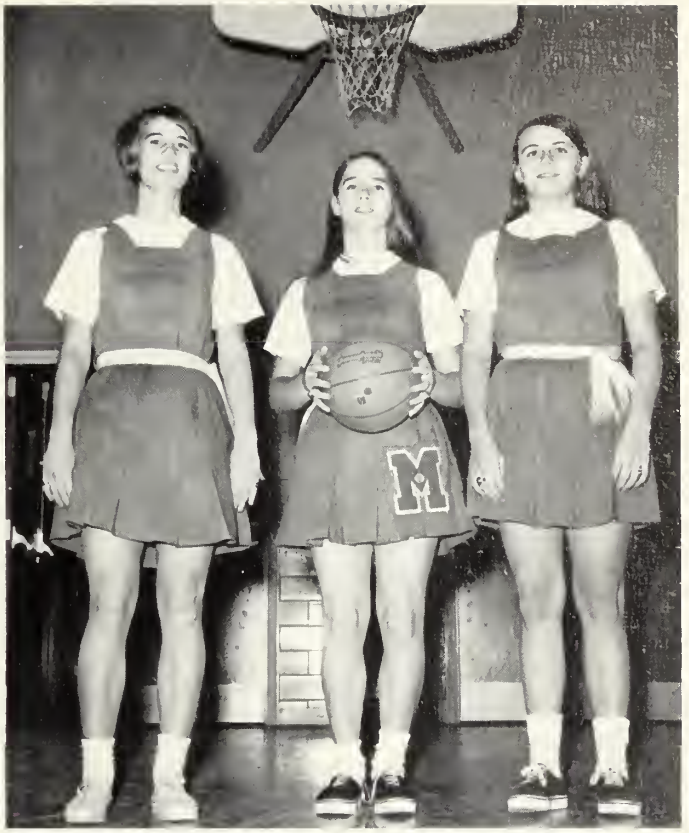
the Song Is You

A group most involved with entertaining the public, the Glee Club combines the songs of the seasons into two separate concerts, presented in December and in May. The success of the performance is determined by the vocal ability of its members and the spirit they put forth.

Three vivacious members of this year's basketball team are Nancy Allen, manager, and Patricia Cummings and Marguerite Letendre, co-captains. With such giants as these on the team, how can we possibly lose!



Ann Marie Tyrrell valiantly tries to outleap her opponent in one of Mount's exciting basketball games, while Nancy Allen stands ready to come to Ann's assistance at a moment's notice.

Mount cheerleaders for the 1969-1970 season are: Paula Aubin, captain, Mary Cavanaugh, Karen Venancio, Kathleen Machado, Paula Charette, Lorraine Paquette, Louise Coppinger, Sandra Asselin, Miriam Santiago, Maureen Sayward, and Janet Trembley.

On Your Mark, Get Set...

The greatest expression of Mount's school spirit is avidly demonstrated in each of its athletic events. Varsity basketball and cheerleading highlight our school sports, while intramurals provide all girls with the opportunity to participate in basketball, volleyball, and swimming.

Through activities sponsored by the Science Club, students are able to extend and explore their interests in the various fields of science. Unusual experiments, movies, and visits to such scientific institutions as the Oceanographic Institute in Boston all made Science Club membership a profitable one.

Alone in the school brewery, Science Club officers Laurie Sampson, president, and Dawn Hannafin, vice-president assemble their latest project, a still for use at their bi-weekly meetings. Not pictured here is Alice Gamelin, secretary-treasurer.

"It could only happen to us," sighs Carol "Grumpy" Vasconcellos, as seven concerned dwarfs, Kerry "Happy" Mello, Denise "Sleepy" Messier, Carolyn "Bashful" Arruda, Margaret "Sneezy" Como, Michelle "Dopey" Demers, and Maureen "Doc" Costa, gather around a sleeping Snow White.

From a scene in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," Bashful, alias Carolyn Arruda, reveals her shyness by avoiding eye contact with the audience as she fidgets with a piece of yarn.

"Miss Witch of the Year," Paula Cordeiro reveals her beauty secrets to the Queen, Nancy O'Connell. We're skeptical about whether our royal queen will take Miss Hex's advice seriously.

Nancy O'Connell cynically derides Witch Hex, Paula Cordeiro, who has just popped in to show off her new "spring" hair-do. Don't be offended, Witch Hex! Beauty is only skin deep!

Willing Suspension of Disbelief

Snow White chasing a little brown bird. A talking giraffe. Tiny Tim. All the preceding phenomena highlighted Mount's ventures into the heady field of drama, where artful scenery, skillful direction and impressive performances created several unforgettable dramatic experiences. The extensive talents of the girls were challenged by the plays, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "The One Who Wouldn't Play Jesus."

Last year's Junior Prom was a memorable evening, especially for Elizabeth Sullivan and her escort Robert Marchand. What mutual secret do they seem to be sharing?

Kenneth Vandal, Jeannine Fournier, Alan Powers, Lynne Cote, Louise Lussier, and Jan Koscinski are having such an enjoyable time at the Junior Prom, that they don't seem too disturbed by the ferocious lobster which threatens to attack their boat.

The scene of our Junior Prom was the Fisherman's Wharf from "Carousel." Here Alice Gamelin and Rene Desmarais dance to the strains of the "Jardineers."

You Are Cordially Invited

The chill of a summer night, formal gowns and nervous escorts, characterized one of the joyous events of our junior year. The musical score from "Carousel" and a fisherman's scene lent a salty New England atmosphere to our Junior Prom.

Mixers play an important part in the social calendar here at Mount, providing a relaxing change of pace after a long week of study. School dances, too, strengthen our relationship with other schools, while giving us the leisure time to become more familiar with those with whom we daily come in contact.

May I Have This Dance

Maria Alves and her Autumn Dance date typify our swinging, singing generation of mod music and costume.

John Poisson and Catherine Lapointe step carefully through the Class Ring at our traditional Ring Dance. 'On dit' that this lucky couple will always be ringed together.

Autumn Dance enthusiasts Elaine Haire, Nancy Rebello, Peter Silva and Alan Strickland pause a few moments to relax between the sounds of "The Resurrection."

Closing

With Zodiacal strength we close the page to a four-year history centering around this, our Aquarian Age. But in attempting to do so, we have been beset with an almost nagging compulsion to spotlight someone in particular who, coincidentally, was born under the sign of the 'Waterbearer'. Sister Mary Ludivine, who has reflected the warmth and understanding typical of her Zodiacal sign, has guided us with discerning Aquarian judgment. As we timidly, but eagerly enter a new decade, Sister's profile, distinct and prolific, looms impressively against this backdrop of brilliance called future. We feel reassured in having known her.
